

A 10x10 grid of 100 small dot patterns. Each pattern is a 5x5 arrangement of dots, where each dot is either present (black) or absent (white), representing a binary digit. The patterns are arranged in a grid where each row and column contains a unique set of patterns, likely representing a binary encoding of the letters A through J. The patterns are small and sparse, with varying numbers of dots per pattern.

• •

